

CLEANTECH

Biomass pioneer grows with acquisitions in France

Danish Dall Energy, which is behind a patented biomass gasification solution, acquires French Weiss France Énergie.

Hørsholm-baserede Dall Energy overtager fransk selskab. | Photo: Cecilie Hånsch Emanuel

BY CECILIE HÄNSCH EMANUEL

2 October 2024 at 11:00

With the acquisition of Weiss France Énergie and its subsidiary Biomasse Services et Maintenance, Hørsholm-based Dall Energy is taking a step towards its goal of becoming a market leader in the French market for biomass technology.

Dall Energy does not want to disclose the purchase price of the companies acquired from the French group Roullier.

"We are excited about the acquisition. Weiss is a leading local supplier of energy technology and our technologies complement each other. Together we can offer even better solutions to France's district heating companies and process industries," says Jens Dall Bentzen, CEO of Dall Energy, in a press release.

Going forward, Dall Energy and Weiss - together with main investor Eiffel IG - will work to help replace the need for fossil fuels; initially in France, later the goal is to reach out wider in the EU.

"France is still a primary market for us, and Weiss' large network and partners will help us build even closer collaborations. We hope to reap synergies as soon as possible," Jens Dall elaborates.

After the acquisition, the total staff will reach approximately 100 employees in Denmark and France.

SHARE ARTICLE   